Introduction

The Chief Electoral Office is responsible for the administration of parliamentary elections and referenda, advising Ministers and Select Committees of Parliament on electoral matters, and supporting the Representation Commission in its determination of electoral boundaries. The Chief Electoral Office is a division of the Ministry of Justice.

This business plan sets out the Chief Electoral Office's strategy, planning assumptions and high level work programme for the period 1 January 2006 to 30 June 2009. It forms part of the Ministry of Justice's wider strategic plan.

The plan is divided into three parts.

Part I sets the overall context and identifies the major strategic themes for the next 3 years.

Part II sets out the major planning assumptions and the detailed projects and timetables through to 2009.

Part III provides basic statistical information on the 2005 general election.

The plan is designed to provide guidance to the Office in carrying out its many activities. I hope it is also of interest to other readers.

Part I - Strategy

Overview

The Chief Electoral Office aims to maintain public and political confidence in the administration of parliamentary elections and referenda. To that end, we strive to improve our services to voters, political parties and candidates and to ensure we act with integrity and impartiality.

The challenges

Planning for parliamentary elections provides many challenges. One is that the date of an election is unknown until a few weeks beforehand. Until the date is certain many tasks, including the employment and training of many thousands of temporary staff and the securing and supply of polling places, cannot be completed.

Another is that there is no permanent field structure. Returning Officers and their staff need to be recruited and trained and the infrastructure that supports them established anew for each election.

We seek to meet these challenges through careful planning and risk management.

The last general election

For 2005 we improved our services to voters with disabilities, reduced barriers to voting, and simplified the important but complex series of post-election day processes that Returning Officers have to complete (the scrutiny of the rolls, the processing of special declaration votes, the official count, and the close down of their headquarters). The technology used by Returning Officers to support the post-election day processes was significantly enhanced for the 2005 election.

Market research showed a high level of public satisfaction with the services provided to voters on polling day. The vast majority used their EasyVote card when they voted, considered the time spent in the polling place reasonable, and were satisfied with the timeliness of the results. New services, such as the sign language DVD on voting, were well received.

Main areas of focus for the next general election

For 2008 the main focus will be on further improving the training for Returning Officers and their staff to enable them to deliver high level services. While capability at all levels was significantly improved for 2005, training continues to be a priority.

Other areas for focus are:

- Improving advance voting services
- Identifying and meeting the needs of voters who face particular barriers to voting
- Simplifying post-election day processes and procedures
- Ensuring that our policies have regard to the needs of Māori voters.

The Chief Electoral Office will contribute to the government's review of the electoral finance regime. The government intends any legislation arising from the review to be enacted by 30 November 2007 so that it is in place in good time for the 2008 election.

The Representation Commission will convene in 2007 to determine new electoral boundaries and this will form a major area of work for the Chief Electoral Officer, who is an ex officio member of the Commission, and for the Chief Electoral Office which provides administrative support to the Commission.

The Chief Electoral Office intends to develop, by 31 December 2007, a long-term strategy on electronic voting. Electronic voting will not be available in 2008.

Vision

Widespread public and political confidence in the administration of the parliamentary electoral process.

There will be widespread public and political confidence in the administration of the parliamentary electoral process if the administration:

- Is impartial, professional and acts in accordance with law
- Supports the rights of voters to vote without undue influence and in secret
- Makes participation easy
- Delivers timely and accurate results
- Continually improves its processes, procedures and service
- Reduces compliance costs as much as possible
- Is responsive to views and concerns of stakeholders
- Is open to public, judicial and parliamentary scrutiny
- Is efficient.

Purpose

Preparation and conduct of New Zealand's general elections, by-elections and referenda.

The Chief Electoral Office is responsible for the administration of parliamentary elections and referenda, advising Ministers and Select Committees of parliament on electoral matters, and providing administrative support to the Representation Commission in its determination of electoral boundaries. The Office also assists electoral agencies of other countries on a reciprocal basis with their electoral events.

Principles of electoral administration

In undertaking its functions the Chief Electoral Office follows the principles of electoral administration endorsed by the Justice & Electoral Select Committee:

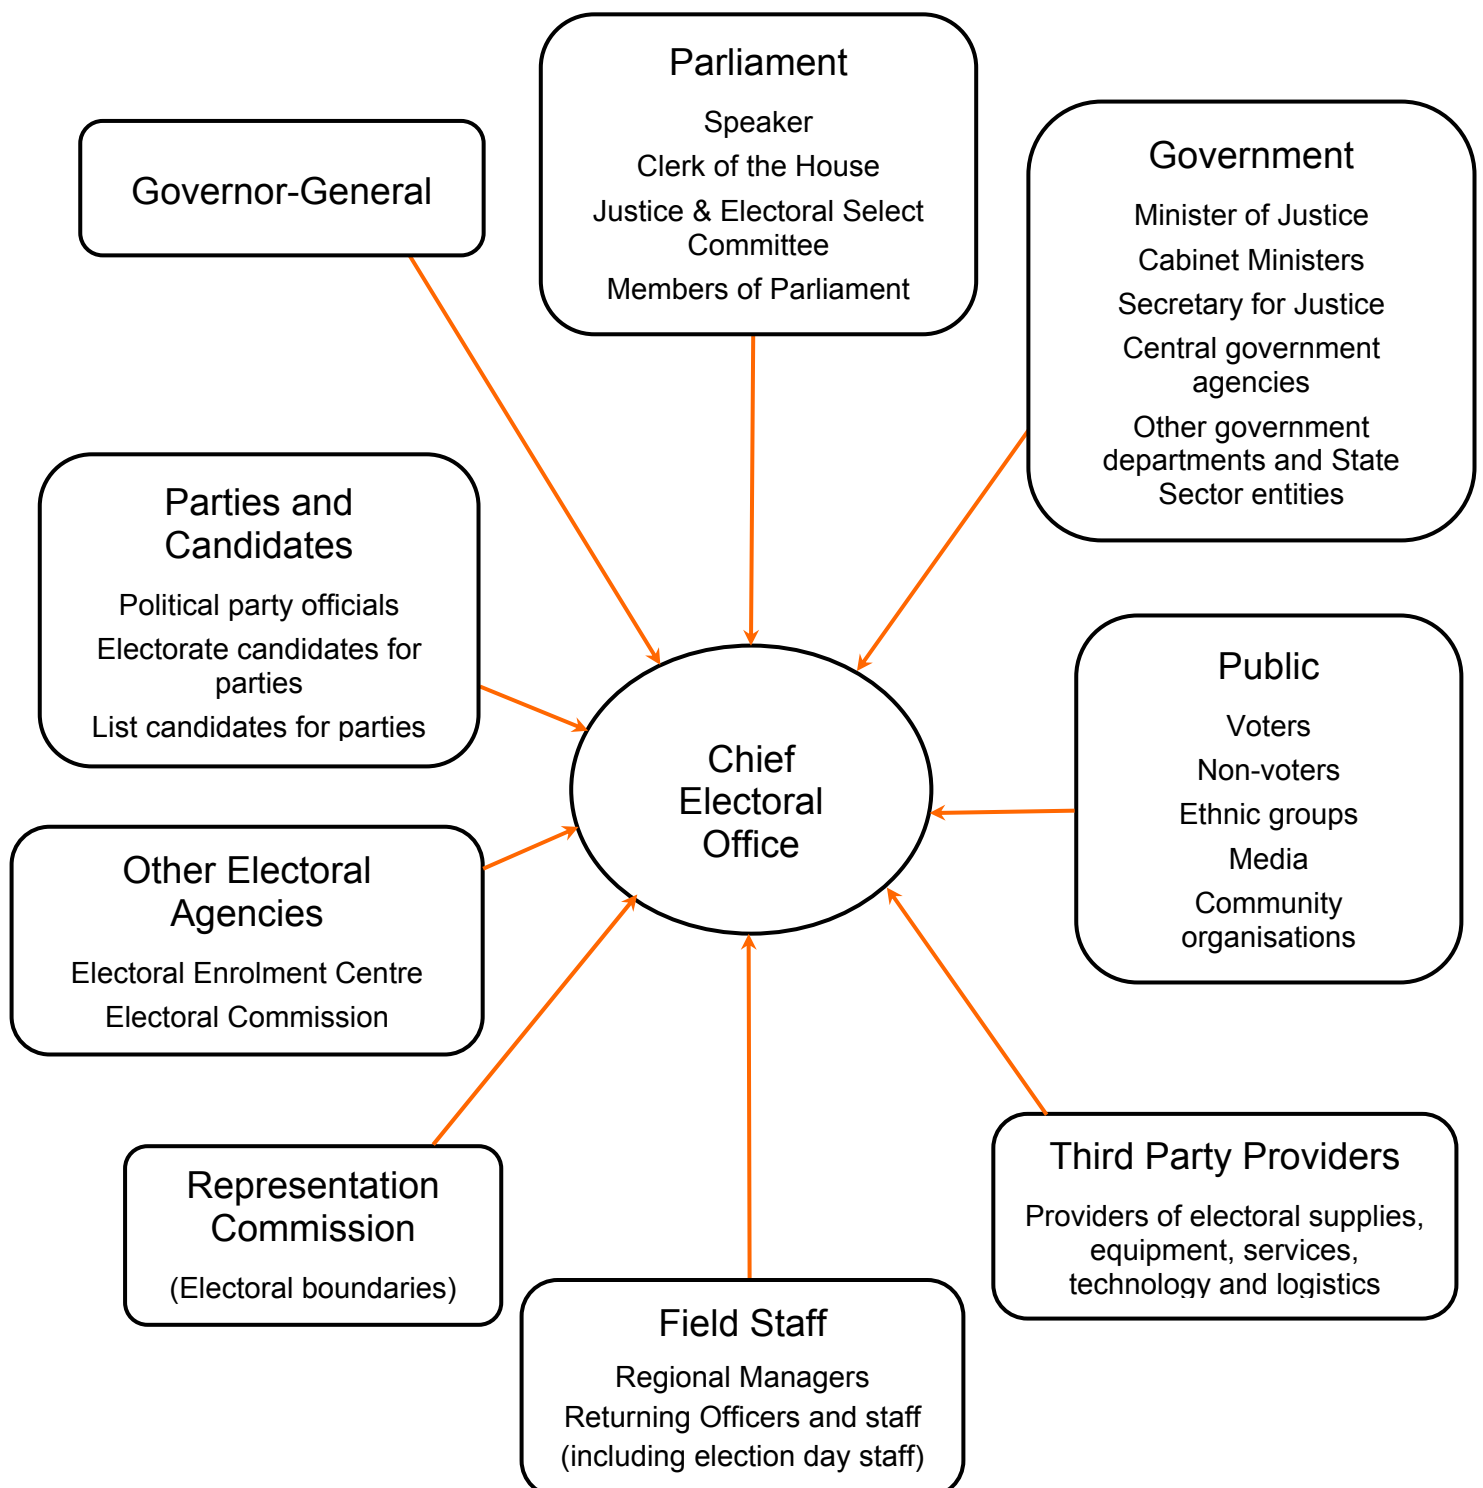

- Independence
- Neutrality
- Service to voters, candidates and parties
- Professionalism
- Responsibility and accountability.

Legislation

The Chief Electoral Officer is a statutory officer employed by the Secretary for Justice.

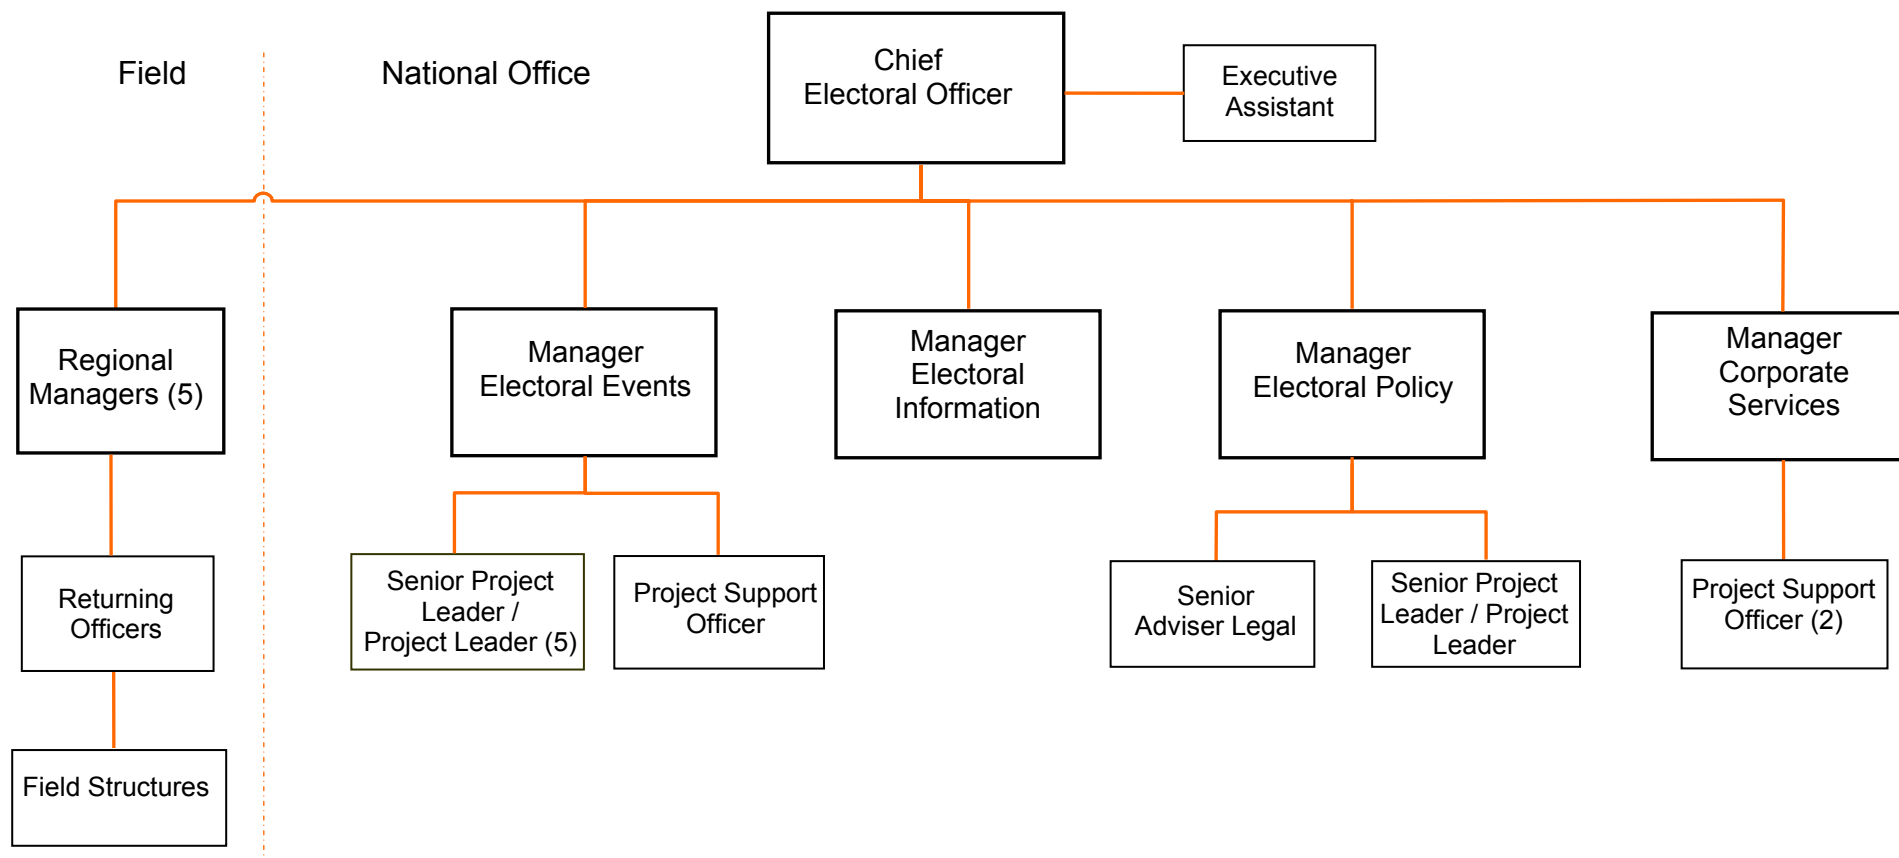

The functions and powers of the Chief Electoral Officer are set out in Parts 6, 7, 8, and 9 of the Electoral Act 1993, the Electoral Regulations 1996, the Citizens Initiated Referenda Act 1993 and the Referenda (Postal Voting) Act 2000. These statutes and their associated regulations are administered by the Ministry of Justice.

Stakeholders

Organisational structure (as at 1 August 2006)

Ministry of Justice: Chief Electoral Office

Note: The number of Returning Officers will not be known until determination of the new electoral boundaries in 2007.

Part II – Operations

Major planning assumptions

The 2006-2009 business plan is based on the following assumptions:

Timing

- The 2008 general election will be held in the second half of the 2008 calendar year (15 November 2008 is the last possible date under the law).
- All processes, systems and procedures will be built and tested by 30 September 2007 and frozen by 31 December 2007.

Service

- Voters and other participants will expect high quality services at the next general election.
- Advance voting services will be improved.
- Services to voters with disabilities will be further improved.
- Service will have regard to the needs of Māori voters.

Notice

- A quality general election can be delivered at eight weeks notice in the second half of the 2008 calendar year.
- A quality by-election can be delivered at eight weeks notice in any year.

Assistance

- Collective state sector support will be forthcoming when needed.

Legislation

- Any legislative changes for 2008 will be in place by 30 November 2007.

Turnout

- 88% of enrolled electors will vote in the 2008 general election.

Training

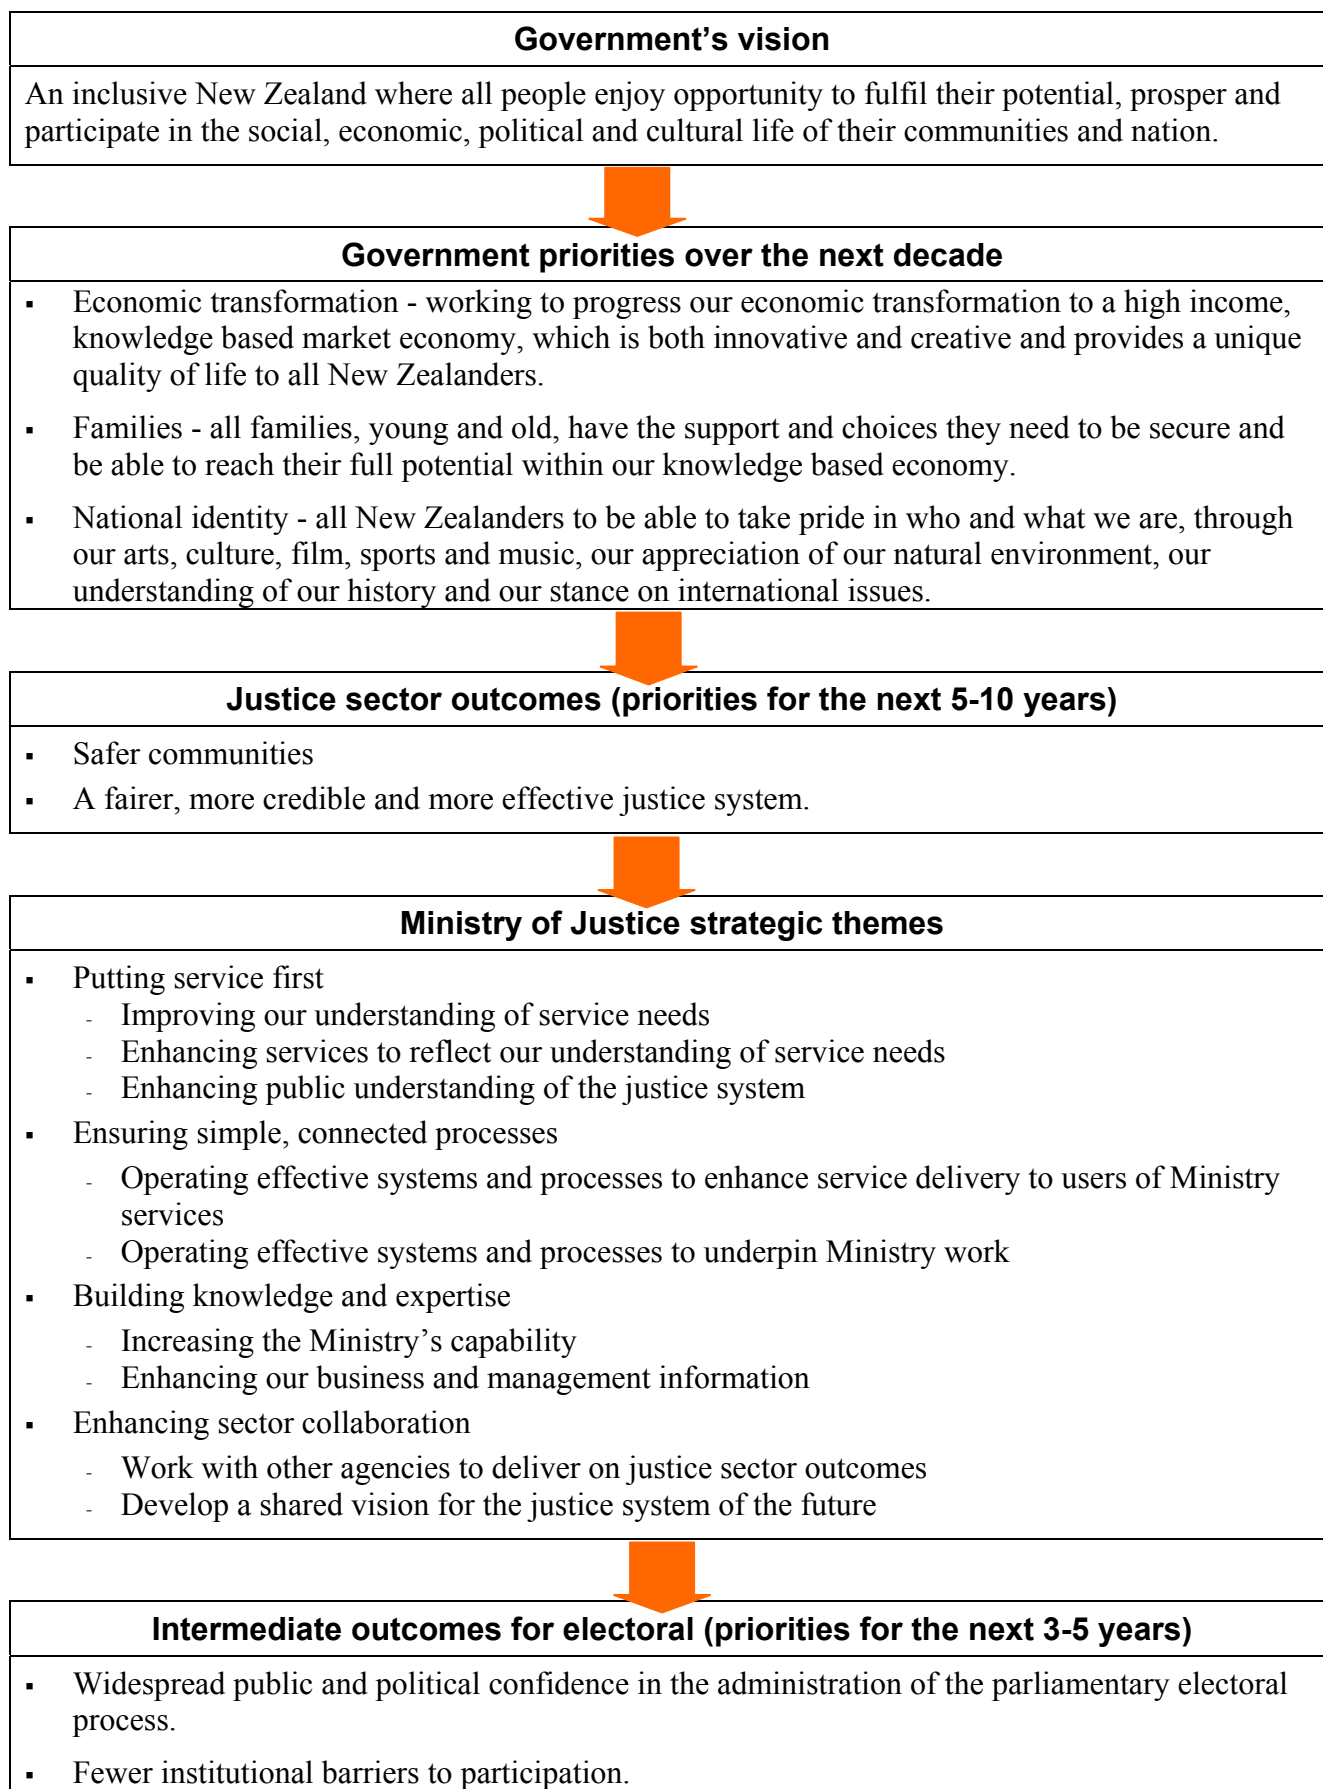

- All staff, including field staff, will be trained.
- Training delivery programmes will be improved.

Funding

- Any referenda or by-election will be funded separately.
- Price level increases for supplies and services will be funded.

Visions, priorities and outcomes

The Chief Electoral Office carries out its work in the context of the New Zealand Justice sector strategies and as part of the Ministry of Justice.

Risk management

We define risk management as:

The systematic application of management policies, procedures and practices to the tasks of identifying, analysing, assessing, treating and monitoring risk.

A risk management framework has been developed by the Ministry of Justice and is used by the Chief Electoral Office. This framework provides a structure for the identification, documentation and management of risks.

The framework requires six questions to be answered:

- What don't we want to happen?
- What could cause this to happen?
- How can we reduce the chance of this happening?
- After taking action, what is the chance of this happening? (Likelihood)
- If it does happen despite our efforts, what more can we do?
- What will the impact be then? (Consequence)

Likelihood and consequence are rated High, Medium or Low and are captured in the following table:

| Consequence | H | | | |
|-------------|---|---|---|---|
| | M | | | |
| | L | | | |
| | | L | M | H |
| Likelihood | | | | |

The position on the table highlights those risks which require more attention than others.

The framework requires the regular reassessment of risks. In addition, new risks are identified progressively. A risk management assessment is produced each quarter.

Critical success factors for Chief Electoral Office

The following success factors are recommended by the Justice and Electoral Select Committee when assessing the management of a general election.

| Success factor | 2005 result |
|---|---|
| Turnout of those enrolled to vote | 80.92% of all enrolled voters (2002:77%, 1999:85%). Non-voting was not caused by institutional barriers to voting. |
| Turnout amongst Māori, Pacific peoples and youth | 67.07% of voters on the Māori roll (2002:58%, 1999:71%). Pacific peoples and youth not separated out. |
| Number of early (advance) votes cast | 8.6% of voters cast advance votes (2002:6.5%, 1999:5.3%). |
| Number of special votes cast and disallowed | 10.79% of voters cast special votes (2002:10.65%, 1999:12.33%). 17.43% of candidate special votes were disallowed (2002:15.21%, 1999:15.97%) 7.16% of party special votes were disallowed (2002:6.93%, 1999:15.97%). |
| Levels of public understanding of the voting system | The low levels of informal voting, the results of the Office's analysis of informal votes, and the levels of split voting, indicate that voters understand the voting process and MMP. |
| Number of upheld complaints and irregularities | 353 complaints received (2002:214). 12 referrals were made to the police relating to election advertising. |
| Number of plural votes | 22 plural voters were referred to the Police (2002:8). |
| Timeliness and accuracy of preliminary count | 90% of polling places were counted by 10.00pm (2002:77%) 99.9% were counted by 11.30pm (2002:98%). |
| Timeliness and accuracy of official count | Results declared accurately and on time. |
