Total election solutions

The DCS Ballot Box has been in use since 1996 and is known for being extremely strong and durable. For more than a decade the DCS Ballot box has been the preferred ballot box of more than 20 countries in Africa, The Middle East, Asia and the Far East. ISO strength tests and several security features make the DCS Ballot Box the obvious choice for your election.

Tested to last

The DCS Ballot box is tested according to the ISO no 2248 & 2872 – drop test and compression strength test. The tests show that the full closed ballot box withstands a drop from 2 and 4 meters height and withstand compression of more than 1,000 kg on the top of the lid. The strength is obtained by a wall thickness of 4.0 mm both in bottom and sides.

Three sizes fits all needs

The DCS Ballot Box comes in three different sizes; 43 ltr, 60 ltr and 80 ltr. Customized lids are also available as our clients can choose between a flap or slide bar solution. Furthermore, different slot opening sizes are also available; 10x2 cm or 23x2 cm opening or as per customer request.

Security Features

- Ballot box is uniquely sequentially numbered. No number will be used twice.
- Each individual ballot box is traceable.
- Ballot box / lid has 4 or 6 holes for sealing of lid to the box to prevent tampering.
- Slot closing will be sealed by one seal to avoid tampering.
- Ballot box is continuously impact tested according to ISO standards.
- Raw material tests are done on a continuous basis.
- Operation control every 4 hours of the production according to quality control.

Dear Reader:

IFES recently celebrated its 20th anniversary, marking two decades of cooperative work around the world helping to give every voice a vote and build the foundation for democracy. IFES continues to be the premier provider of professional electoral assistance in the world and is constantly working to improve the quality of services that it provides to electoral commissions and other groups engaged in the electoral cycle.

IFES' work includes commodity procurement—helping both to determine procurement specifications and to conduct competitive, open and transparent procurement processes. Through major commodity procurements in the recent past, IFES has continued to build its experience and credibility as a strong, transparent and competitive procurement agent that brings professionalism to commodity procurement and ensures the quality, completeness and timeliness of procurements.

An important lesson from IFES' experience in the procurement of goods and services is that adequate procurement requires advance planning, clear determination of procurement requirements and transparency. IFES believes, and many others agree, that the 2008 Buyer's Guide and its online updates at www.ifesbuyersguide.com play an important role in managing a fair and competitive procurement process. IFES strives to be an unbiased provider of information regarding products available in the electoral marketplace. As you will see, the Buyer's Guide provides the single most complete and comprehensive source of information on the network of companies that provide electoral supplies, equipment and services at this time.

This year's Buyer's Guide includes 54 of the leading companies selling more than 140 listed products and services needed to manage elections. The directory and category index help users easily find the best match for a particular need.

IFES and its partners worked diligently to ensure that all companies able to meet the needs of electoral professionals were included in this year's print edition. We encourage vendors unable to participate in this print edition to contact us to be included in the online version. We also welcome suggestions to help us improve the Buyer's Guide, and we look forward to hearing from you about how IFES can better help meet your needs through this resource and the knowledge and talent of its own network of electoral experts.

Sincerely,

ELECTORAL MODERNISATION- THE UK PRACTITIONERS' PERSPECTIVE

by John Turner

Electoral modernisation in the United Kingdom has followed a somewhat faltering path since its introduction some 10 years ago. The Association of Electoral Administrators (AEA) has taken a keen interest in the ongoing debate since that time. However, its stance in recent years has become more sceptical largely because modernisation does not appear to have delivered lasting benefits that can be applied in a universal way.

The Ministry of Justice, which is the government department responsible for electoral legislation and policy, defines electoral modernisation as “giving people choice in the way they exercise their vote.” Its aim is to develop policies and processes to make elections more accessible, improve participation, enhance security and improve the efficiency and cost-effectiveness of elections. Most of this work in the last decade has been on initiatives such as pilots to test innovations in local elections, and the Co-ordinated Online Record of Electors (CORE) information system, which will provide a single source of electoral registration information to authorised users.

Following the May 2007 elections, the AEA expressed considerable concern that:

- a number of problems were identified with the electronic count and counting procedures at the combined Scottish parliamentary and local government elections<sup>1</sup>

- insufficient time was allowed to properly test systems used to identify postal voters by their date of birth and signature
- the Electoral Commission, in a summary report of their evaluation of a sixth electoral pilot since 2000, recommended that a range of significant challenges that arose with both electronic voting and counting systems be addressed<sup>2</sup>

In the AEA's post-election report following the May 2007 elections, we commented on these issues and expressed considerable concern over their impact on public confidence and the democratic process itself. Similarly, with respect to future pilots at elections, we supported the view of the Electoral Commission that,

“there should be a gap of at least one year before consideration is given to any further piloting of electoral innovations at local government elections. This period of time should be used to develop and debate a robust electoral modernisation strategy that would review progress, propose a new way forward and instigate a public and policy debate.”

So where does all of this leave the AEA and its members? Some years ago when the late Robin Cook was Leader of the House of Commons, he talked about the general election due by around 2010 being e-enabled. The chances of that happening are no more real today than they were when he made that statement. My comment is made more in sorrow than anger. There is no doubt that Robin Cook was both a visionary and a reformer, and the AEA welcomed the ambition behind his statement. Sadly, since that time, there has been little positive progress on which to base a modernisation policy for the future.

A local election count held at Brighton and Hove Council in the South East of England, UK in May 2007 / AEA

The AEA's current position is little different from what it was when the whole modernisation process was first mooted in the late 1990s. At that time, we said that although we would welcome any initiative that improved service for the voter and increased opportunities for participation, there had to be sufficient checks and balances in place, and the overriding principle had to be to maintain and improve public confidence in the overall system that underpins our democracy.

We have cooperated with government and the Electoral Commission in terms of the various initiatives over the past eight years or so, and we will continue to do so. In doing that, we will seek to influence forward thinking and planning and to provide the necessary opportunities for our members to become involved with and to introduce new or developing systems that meet the above objectives. However, we will continue to measure any proposals against the principle espoused above and to argue for it at every opportunity. Currently, we are awaiting an announcement from the government on its future electoral modernisation strategy. We hope that the lessons learned over the past decade will have been taken into account in settling that strategy. One thing is certain—the AEA will be at the forefront of arguing the case from the viewpoint of both the elector and the administrator.

ABOUT AEA

The AEA was founded in 1987 and is the leading professional body in the United Kingdom solely interested in the administration of electoral matters. It is a non-governmental and non-partisan body and has more than 1,500 members, the majority of whom are employed by local authorities to provide electoral registration and election services.

PLANNING AND IMPLEMENTING ELECTORAL PROCUREMENT

by Anne-Sofie Holm and Karen Hong

Over the years, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) has developed an extensive understanding and experience in providing technical assistance and support to the conduct of democratic elections, through either UNDP headquarters or its country offices. UNDP (previously through UNDP/IAPSO) has become a major actor in the procurement of electoral materials, ranging from ballots and ballot boxes, to ink, stationery, and digital voter registration equipment. UNDP has recently increased its focus on the crucial pre-polling period of planning and budgeting for procurement of electoral material.

This new focus reflects a recognition that the will of the people, freely and fairly expressed through periodic and genuine elections, is the basis of the authority and legitimacy of governments—and, moreover, that by far the greatest share of an electoral budget is taken up by the procurement of electoral material and services. It also reflects the increasing concern over how public funds are being managed in general.

UNDP has reinforced the procurement function and related higher-level advisory services by establishing a Procurement Services Office (PSO) in New York and Copenhagen under the leadership of James Provenzano. Two sub-units deal directly with elections: the Special Advisory Team (SAT), covering advisory services, and the Global Procurement Unit (GPU), representing the operational arm.

SPECIAL ADVISORY TEAM ON ELECTIONS

SAT Elections provides continuous assistance to UNDP country offices and electoral management bodies (EMBs) through advice and support on planning and budgeting, on-site training and, in most cases, targeted exploratory, formulation and assessment missions. The team works in close collaboration with UNDP's Bureau of Development Policy, whose governance department, under the leadership of Linda Maguire, provides fundamental political parameters and guidance for UNDP's overall direction and strategy.

SAT Elections is part of the EC-UNDP Task Force for Electoral Assistance, which focuses on supporting the electoral cycle rather than a single electoral event, including but not limited to planning, budgeting and implementing electoral assistance and providing specific guidance on project document design, resources, partnerships, evaluation and procurement.

UNDP/SAT seeks to raise awareness that procurement has a much larger scope than

Mock registration in Conakry, Guinea / UNDP

Elections are often perceived as crucial milestones of progress, signs to the international donor community of political consistency and commitment to common democratic norms. However, technical assistance does not always take into consideration crucial challenges and dilemmas, such as timing and appropriate sequencing; the mechanics of elections (the electoral system); an adequate legal framework; an independent neutral electoral administration; state infrastructure to support logistics and communications; the status of political parties and the business of democratic politics (such as warring factions and their demobilization/disarmament status); and the existence of a vibrant civil society and free media. All these factors are essential for the quality of an election, and their status will form and potentially limit the involvement of UNDP/SAT.

generally acknowledged. The common understanding of procurement is limited to the purchasing of goods. However, support areas, such as capacity building of state structures, including election commissions, and support to civil society organisations and national NGOs for civic education, are all services that also require the commitment of public funds. Therefore, when these services are not covered via a programmatic framework, they are also considered procurement activities and therefore need to go through a competitive process if UNDP is involved. Furthermore, UNDP/SAT seeks to increase the focus on ethics and professionalism in the pre-voting planning and procurement phase.

In addition, UNDP/SAT will strive for critical analysis of when it makes sense and when the environment is right to have an election, rather than pushing or supporting early elections to, for example, enable an unrealistic government agenda or an international community effort to identify a counterpart, through the ballot, for the reconstruction of the country. SAT Elections will introduce a methodology of assessing the quality of elections and electoral planning in terms of transparency and fairness from a procurement point of view—in other words, a meaningful framework for assessing the quality of the crucial pre-planning phase, which will affect the end result, as well as the credibility of UNDP.

The most commonly experienced obstacles and risks in electoral procurement preparations are the decisions on implementation methodologies, development of technical specifications and terms of reference, time constraints, insufficient budgets for procurement needs and national ownership and capacities.

Technological innovations in the administration of elections raise new issues with regards to cost effectiveness and sustainability. High-tech solutions offer the hope of credible elections with fewer possibilities for human error at lower cost. This opportunity should ideally lead to a debate on the appropriate technology for a particular country context. UNDP/SAT has noted that while introducing new technology can reduce costs and increase sustainability in the longer term, it poses a tremendous cost for procurement of equipment. In some cases, the new technology may be used only once, and by only one public institution, unless synergies emerge in a wider institutional modernization plan. Electoral budgets are often full of funding gaps, particularly when new technologies are being introduced, and this pushes a tremendous burden onto development partners.

Acknowledging these factors, UNDP/SAT is pursuing a new procurement approach. In addition to the usual procurement of electoral equipment (as per established UNDP rules and regulations), UNDP/SAT is now examining the options of leasing electoral material and technical expertise from suppliers, or even outsourcing turn-key electoral services, for example by using a benchmark of the voter registration of a certain estimated number of people. These methodologies are being investigated, and so far suppliers seem positive towards these new concepts.

Finally, UNDP/SAT and GPU will continue to have Long Term Agreements (LTAs) for the most strategic and essential electoral materials. The purpose of the LTAs is to ensure efficiency in procurement turn-around time and to limit repetitive tendering exercises within the boundaries of UNDP procurement rules and regulations. LTAs also provide guaranteed quality assurance and quality control and the benefits of economies of scale, both in terms of products and logistics.

THE TRADE SHOW: YOUR “ONE-STOP” SHOPPING EXPERIENCE

by Peggy Sparks and Tony J. Sirvello III

You are responsible for elections in your jurisdiction. You carry the title of supervisor of elections, administrator of elections, election technician, county clerk, county auditor, election commissioner, director of elections, city clerk or one of the many other titles carried by election officials throughout the international world of elections. You are faced with purchasing new equipment or upgrading older equipment; you want to find a better way; you want to find out how your peers are operating; you want to find the most cost-effective way to administer elections; you need reassurance that you are not alone in the spotlight that has fallen on election officials in today’s election universe. Where do you go?

IACREOT’S TRADE SHOW

For over 35 years, companies, new and old, have revealed their latest technologies and products at IACREOT’s annual trade show. Vendors are eager to showcase the usefulness of their products and offer hands-on displays of their products, allowing you, the consumer, to test-drive the equipment and ask questions.

The IACREOT trade show debuts with a Grand Opening Social Hour, during which delegates can interact with the various exhibitors, taking time to check out each and every booth for further study the next day, when the trade show is open for a full day’s activity. The connection between the vendors and the consumer—you, the election official—can continue long after the close of the show with more personal, one-on-one discussions of your requirements.

The annual conference and trade show also offers delegates several educational opportunities, from continuing education certificates for attendance at division-specific seminars to graduation credits for the Chancellor’s Certificate in Public Administration Program, in conjunction with the University of Missouri, St. Louis.

The International Association of Clerks, Recorders, Election Officials and Treasurers (IACREOT) was founded in 1971 by a small group of government officials who wanted more than they were getting from their previous association. They wanted more opportunities to network with their fellow professionals, and as a result they created an organization in which elected and appointed officials, and their staffs, could share ideas and work together to effect change at all levels of government.

Today, IACREOT has more than 1,500 members, who represent all levels of government. International members include election officials from Canada, New Zealand, the United Kingdom, Australia, Nigeria, Albania, the Philippines and the Virgin Islands. IACREOT provides members with professional resources, enabling election officials to serve their respective jurisdictions with the highest degree of competence and professionalism. # REACHING AMERICANS ABROAD

by Susan Dzieduszycka-Suinat and Dan Murphy

Members of the uniformed services and American citizens residing abroad face unique voter registration challenges when voting as overseas absentee voters. They might not receive their ballots in time or their voted ballots might not arrive until after the deadline set by their local election officials, in which case their votes may not be counted. As a result, their right to vote is far too often compromised. Overseas Vote Foundation (OVF) provides proven tools and services to overseas and uniformed services voters and local election officials, which have effectively facilitated the franchise of hundreds of thousands of U.S. military and overseas voters.

OVF's mission is to increase the participation of eligible uniformed service and overseas voters in U.S. federal elections. With that goal in mind, OVF has developed online tools and services to provide information to voters and assist them to register and request ballots. The Pew Charitable Trusts has provided grant support through its "Make Voting Work" initiative to develop OVF's new 2008 suite of voter services. OVF now provides state-of-the-art, interactive web applications for the formerly manual and error-prone process of overseas and military voter registration. Automation of this process lowers costs and offers increased access to voters. In addition, OVF offers information services that cover the key state requirements for registration dates and deadlines, as well as a comprehensive online directory of contact information for the thousands of local election officials in the United States.

With the OVF web application, voters don't need coaching through the form completion process; forms arrive with legible and complete information; emails are captured for easier contact between local election officials; and, perhaps most importantly, voters love it!

PARTNERS WITH OVF

In partnership with the JEHT Foundation, OVF is taking an innovative step in expanding the reach of its technology by allowing election officials, citizen groups and corporations to offer OVF-hosted systems. The entire OVF software suite is offered to interested organizations (states, corporations and any other group) with their own customized design. From the voter's perspective, the services are provided by the organization, while OVF provides design, development, support, hosting and reporting. Any organization can provide high-quality overseas and military voter services at a fraction of the cost of developing such a system on their own.

OVF's hosted system partnerships represent a significant advancement in voter outreach for the organizations that chose to use the technology to improve services to their overseas citizens.

OHIO

The state of Ohio created a site in partnership with OVF, ohio.overseasvotefoundation.org, to enhance voter services to Ohio citizens abroad.

"There is no other organization providing these services nationally, and we are proud to collaborate with OVF to serve all of our UOCAVA (Uniformed and Overseas Citizen Absentee Voting Act) constituents," said Ohio State Secretary Jennifer Brunner. "We expect to see a jump in participation in 2008."

MINNESOTA

Minnesota has also created a new voter services site at minnesota.overseasvotefoundation.org. Secretary of State Mark Ritchie stated:

"We are looking forward to bringing a vastly increased number of registrations in from overseas citizen and active-duty military voters in 2008. Our new Minnesota voter services site will facilitate voting for members of the Minnesota National Guard, many of whom will be first-time military voters this year."

ALABAMA

Beth Chapman, Alabama Secretary of State, who in the near term will be launching an Alabama-specific site at Overseasfoundation.org said:

"The OVF hosted system program is an innovative program in the elections arena for boosting UOCAVA voter participation. We are excited to be at the forefront with this technology and able to offer quality voter services to Alabama's military and overseas voters."

With an OVF hosted system, each organization can run a voter help desk to manage support for their voters or can defer to OVF for help-desk support. This reduces the training and support burden on staff members. A reporting dashboard provides real-time data regarding voter registrations occurring on each hosted site. All that is required is a link from the organization's homepage to the OVF hosted system page, and voters can begin getting information or registering.

OVF is the first and only private organization that can offer a full-service, ready-to-customize overseas and military voter registration system and accompanying services to help every organization reach its goals of boosting voter participation and providing quality service.

KEEPING PACE WITH TECHNOLOGY

by Richard Twigg

Keeping up with the latest technology trends can be a daunting task for election officials and even IT professionals. The rapid development of technology makes even the latest new gadget obsolete in a matter of months. With all these changes, how can you keep current? I suggest attending events concentrating on IT and elections, using various information resources and turning to IFES.

EVENTS

Election officials can keep up with the latest trends in e-voting technology by attending conferences and workshops. I attended the World E-democracy Forum in Paris last year and found that to be an excellent opportunity to network and to see how election technology is being put into practice.

Two other notable events held recently were the Overseas Vote Foundation's recent conference in Munich, Germany, which addressed the challenges of military overseas voting and E-Voting.CC's seminar covering "Information Technology in the Electoral Process" in cooperation with the Danube University in Krems.

These and similar events are excellent opportunities to meet vendors and election officials that are implementing this technology right now. Understanding their experiences and best practices is helpful when facing decisions about the pros and cons of introducing or managing election technologies. See the sidebar for additional events that you may still attend in 2008.

INFORMATION RESOURCES

You can also keep connected with election technology news through various papers, journals, books and web sites. Some publications I have found useful include:

- Voting Technology: The not-so-simple act of casting a ballot, published by Brookings Institution Press.
- From Power Outages to Paper Trails, published by IFES.
- In Electronic Elections: The Perils and Promises of Digital Democracy, published by Princeton University Press.
- Electronic Voting and Democracy: A Comparative Analysis, published by Palgrave MacMillan.

Web resources include:

INTERNATIONAL FOUNDATION FOR ELECTORAL SYSTEMS

IFES can be a resource for expert advice on election technology. IFES has worked in many countries assisting Election Management Bodies (EMBs) on planning, procuring and managing electoral technologies. Recent examples of IFES' work include efforts to implement efficient and secure computer networks that manage in-house applications as basic as e-mail to more complex voter registration databases and websites where voters can access information about candidates and assist in voter outreach. IFES also regularly convenes international experts to discuss trends and issues involving election technology at its headquarters and in collaboration with our many field offices worldwide.

UPDATE ON ELECTORAL TECHNOLOGY

In the 2007 IFES Buyers Guide, I wrote about the latest technologies in Europe and an e-voting pilot in Hamburg, Germany, using digital pen technology. A hacker organization claims to have found security flaws in the voting system. They presented a scenario where real ballots could be replaced by manually manipulated ones; however, the methods of such manipulation were not explained nor was an actual attempt to hack the system tested against the software's built-in security. Despite completing a certification processes, the solution was not considered for use in Hamburg's February 2008 local elections, due to the heightened security concerns. The co-operation between Diagramm Halbach and Anoto will continue and Anoto is still looking at the market segment of e-voting systems with interest.

E-VOTING EVENTS IN 2008

The 2008 USENIX/ACCURATE Electronic Voting Technology Workshop (EVT '08) will be held July 28–29, 2008, in San Jose, Calif. This workshop is sponsored by USENIX, The Advanced Computing Systems Association and ACCURATE, A Center for Correct, Usable, Reliable, Auditable and Transparent Elections.

The 3rd International Conference on Electronic Voting 2008 (EVOTE08) will be held from August 6 to 9, 2008, in Bregenz, Austria. This biennial conference is organized by the Competence Center for Electronic Voting and Participation.

Equipment and logistical solutions for elections world-wide DCS Group will meet your expectations

Experience and references

For more than 12 years, DCS Group has supplied customized equipment and logistical solutions for elections world-wide. With reference organisations such as EU, IFES, OSCE, UNOPS, UNDP, USAID and reference countries like Afghanistan, Burundi, D.R.C, Iraq, Liberia, Palestine Uganda and Zambia, DCS has become a trustworthy organisation to turn to when it comes to election material.

We have extensive experience in logistics and supplies to Africa, The Middle East, Eastern Europe, Asia & The Far East. Since the very first project to Bosnia & Herzegovina in 1996, DCS has come a long way and gained valuable experience in the process. We know that elections are sometimes held under extreme logistical, political and social conditions and we are always willing to share our expertise and help the different election commissions and organisations with their needs from the very beginning of the process.

Supply Chain Management

At DCS Group we do not compromise with Supply Chain Management. Logistics, service and quality in all aspects must always be our strength.

DCS Group and our key manufacturing partners are all as a minimum ISO 9001:2000 certified and our general suppliers undergo strict quality assurance tests by undergoing and accepting that all their respective products live up to AQL 4.0 Standard as a minimum; "The acceptable Quality Level".

Each product manufactured for DCS Group is inspected and approved during production and prior to final packing. When needed, raw material tests are done on a continuous basis and process controls are used to control the production where relevant. As an example, an operational control every four hours controls the quality of our different sizes of plastic ballot boxes.

On top of our ISO procedures, DCS Group also have an internal quality system. This comprises planning, coordination and implementation of all activities that can affect the quality of our products and services.

Product Focus

At DCS Group our focus has always been to supply our customers with the complete solution from the registration of voters to actual election day. A range of well known quality products from DCS is described below.

Digital Registration Kit

DCS has developed a very user friendly Digital registration kit for the registration of voters. It merely takes 60 seconds to register a voter into the system, which makes it one of the fastest systems in use today. The registration kit comes in a waterproof suitcase and can be designed according to customers request such as barcode scanner, fingerprint scanner, biometric photo capture etc.

ISO tested Plastic Ballot Boxes

The DCS Ballot box has been in use since 1996 and has a reputation for being extremely strong and durable. The ballot boxes are continuously being drop tested and tested for compression strength according to ISO procedures 2248 & 2872. Our ballot box is available in three different sizes: 43 ltr, 65 ltr and 80 ltr. Furthermore, different slot sizes such as 10x2 cm and 23x2 cm are also available. The DCS Ballot box is produced in Kenya.

Registration and polling station kits

From our different warehouses in Denmark, Croatia, Turkey & China, DCS Group is able to customize and pack election kits according to our customers demand. The quality of the products we use for the kits is according to the AQL standards and our Supply Chain Management system makes sure that everything is checked according to our internal and ISO 9001:2000 procedures.

CASE STORY: Palestine 2005

In 2005 DCS Group was awarded the contract for the Palestinian Presidential elections. The order was for polling station kits, ballot boxes, plastic security seals and different types of marking ink. Within two weeks from receipt of order DCS procured, packed and delivered 6.500 specially designed polling station kits and different bulk materials for the Palestinian Election Commission in Ramallah.

CASE STORY: Zambia 2006

For the Zambia elections in 2006 DCS Group was awarded contracts for Lanterns, batteries and stamps. All the materials were to be delivered to the Election Commission warehouse in Lusaka with duties and VAT taken care of at time of delivery. We were able to get the goods into Zambia and pay all relevant taxes and duties in a very short time frame. Due to this, the election commission had more than sufficient time to distribute the material out to the different polling stations.

CASE STORY: Nepal 2007

On the basis of quality, DCS Group was awarded the order for 60.000 ballot boxes and 860.000 corresponding seals to the Nepal elections in 2007. Not only did DCS win the order, we were also awarded the task of delivering the goods to all final destinations in Nepal. The task of moving 26 x 40" containers through India, over the Nepali border, onto the sites and unloading the pallets at the final destinations was done without any delay and to great satisfaction to the Election Commission.

Election Day ← Made Easier →

By Automated Election Services

ELECTIONS

Elections are conducted in a high profile environment that is intolerant of error or inefficiency. With recent events and publicity, the election process has become one of the most closely scrutinized functions of government. Voters, candidates, the press and other media focus an incredible amount of attention on this critical function of government. Add to this complex task the various technologies for precinct voting, absentee tabulation and election night results reporting, part time poll officials that must be trained by an office staff already stretched to its limits and you have all the ingredients for disaster.

ABSENTEE VOTER/BALLOT MANAGEMENT SYSTEMS

AutoVote "On Demand" Ballot printing system

- ▼ No Waste Ballot production
- ▼ Verifiable Ballot Issuance Audit Tracking
- ▼ Integrated Ballot Register
- ▼ On-Site "Early Voting" capable
- ▼ Integrates with existing VR Systems

AUTOVOTE BALLOTPAK MAIL PIECE MANAGEMENT

- ▼ Verification Features
  - ▼ Date and Time Stamp
  - ▼ Selective Opening
  - ▼ Audit and Review
  - ▼ Integration to Election Management System
  - ▼ Sort by Precinct

AUTOVOTE TOTAL PROCESS MANAGEMENT SYSTEM

To address the increasingly complex data management requirements of the election process, AES has designed:

- ▼ AutoVote Voter Management System
- ▼ AutoVote BallotTrack System
- ▼ AutoVote Absentee Ballot Management System
- ▼ AutoVote BallotPak Mail Ballot Distribution System
- ▼ AutoVote Electronic Canvass System
- ▼ Internet ready AutoVote E-Canvass Results Reporting System

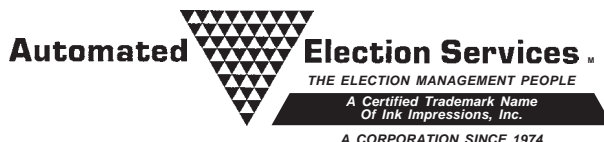

The above systems are custom tailored to address the widely varying needs of today's election jurisdictions featuring the latest technology incorporating:

- ▼ BarCoding
- ▼ Absentee Ballot Tracking
- ▼ Digital and Adhesive Label Generation
- ▼ Document Scanning and Indexing
- ▼ Signature Image Scanning and Retrieval

Using the Autovote System Modules, AES will design a customized solution to your election management challenges. Whether it's tabulation, ballot generation, absentee ballot issuance and tracking or a full turnkey election management project, AES is the source for Election Management solutions.

Everyone Counts' multi-channel elections provide an accessible, transparent and verifiably secured choice for voters.

Everyone Counts has been leading the elections industry through accessibility, security and election process "firsts" for over a decade. With secured telephone and Internet voting, voters living or serving overseas, as well as voters with disabilities, illiteracy and language and access barriers can now participate in elections easily, securely, privately and independently.

● Election Experience

Everyone Counts pioneered the first single transferrable vote (STV) election online in 1997, the first government PKI-secured election in 2003, the first established online channel for major political party elections in 2003, the first Australian Department of Defense online vote for military serving abroad in 2007, and the first Vote Anywhere Multi-channel government election in the world in the United Kingdom in 2007. On February 5, 2008, Everyone Counts opened the first-ever online channel for a global presidential primary, where voters living in 165 countries and territories around the world were able to vote securely, ensuring their ballots would be counted.

Americans demand secure, reliable, transparent, accessible and professionally-run elections. Every election participant - voters, poll workers, election officials, advocates and analysts, candidates and policy makers – The Pollworker Institute (PI) achieves this vision in an increasingly complex and changing election environment. We work to develop strategic processes, policies, and procedures resulting in a positive election experience for all.

Who We Are

The Pollworker Institute (PI) is a non-profit, non-partisan, education, research and technical assistance organization. PI's principals, advisors, and partners are passionate about each facet of democracy. PI supports initiatives involving voter participation, voter education and public service, supporting poll workers, advancing the cadre of dedicated and talented election professionals to ensure that the conduct of elections are accurate, transparent, and accountable at all levels. This passion fuels our vision to offer a positive election experience for voters.

Our Core Services

The Pollworker Institute (PI) provides strategic management consulting services and direct support to election administrators at all levels by developing professional programs, practices and procedures that can be successfully adapted and implemented in jurisdictions at the local, state and national level.

Highlighted Resources for 2008 & Beyond

The Pollworker Institute (PI) worked with the U.S. Election Assistance Commission (EAC) to develop the "Guidebook of Successful Practices for Poll Worker Recruitment, Training, and Retention". This user-friendly EAC Guidebook offers strategies and practical tips for recruiting volunteers and training on new voting equipment and can be found at www.thepollworkerinstitute.org OR www.eac.gov/election/poll%20workers.

Total election solution

Over the years, DCS Group has gained valuable experience in supplying customized equipment and logistical solutions to elections world-wide. With reference organisations such as EU, IFES, OSCE, UNOPS, UNDP and USAID, DCS Group has become a trustworthy organisation to turn to when it comes to election material.

We base our approach to customers on the following sound foundations:

- Complete solutions
- Speed of response
- Innovation and customer focus
- Service and quality

Elections are often held under extreme logistical and political conditions and we are working closely with our manufacturing partners in Europe and The Far East in order to optimize and secure the DCS supply chain management flow.

DCS owns and manages a number of warehouses and offices around the world where we are able to pack and customize any kind of election polling station kit or registration kit as per our customer's specific requirements.

Custom slot sizes for any size ballot

Double ridge lid for ultimate security

The 'Mix and Match' line of ballot boxes from CODE Inc. sets the standard for security in elections worldwide. A growing list of clients chooses CODE Inc. ballot boxes for security, value and reliable delivery.

The box and lid are designed to provide the ultimate in security.

Once sealed, the interior ridges on the lid prevent penetration and eliminate tampering with the contents. No other product offers the same degree of protection.

Ballot boxes nest into each other during transport and storage, and sealed boxes can be stacked. Smaller boxes are ideal for remote areas while larger ones are well suited to urban centers with many voters or where the ballot is large. Deploying the proper size to each polling station leads to savings on materials, transport and storage costs.
